Definition

Cookies are small text files (letters and/or numbers) containing groups of information stored in Your devices (e.g., computer, smartphone, tablet) every time they visit a website through a browser. At each subsequent visit the browser sends these cookies to the website which originated them or to another website.

Cookies allow websites to store certain information in order to allow you to navigate online in a simple and fast way.

Cookies are used for different purposes and have different characteristics. They can be distinguished according to the following criteria:

a) on the basis of the entity which manages the cookie:

(i) first-party cookies: these cookies are installed directly by the Company through the Website;

(ii) third-party cookies: these cookies are installed through the Website by third parties other than the Company;

b) on the basis of the time in which the cookie remains active:

(i) session cookies: these cookies store the necessary information during the browsing session and are deleted immediately after the session expires, that is when the browser is closed;

(ii) persistent cookies: these cookies are stored on your hard disk and the Website reads them each time you visit it again. A persistent cookie has a specific expiration date, after which it will cease to work.

c) on the basis of the purposes pursued:

some cookies are necessary to allow you to use its features (so-called technical cookies). Other cookies are used to obtain statistical information, whether aggregate or not, on the number of users accessing the Website and on how the Website is used (so-called analytics cookies). Moreover, other cookies are used to track your profile in order to display on the Website advertisements that may be in line with your

Types of cookies used on the Website

·   Technical cookies

We use first-party technical cookies for the sole purpose of allowing you to visit the Website and use its features. They can be further distinguished in:

(i) navigation cookies: they guarantee the normal use of the Website and normally are session cookies, which are automatically deleted when the browser is closed;

(ii) functionality cookies: they allow you to browse the Website on the basis of selected criteria (e.g., language or country of origin), in order to improve the services provided on the Website. These are persistent cookies, which remain on your computer even after the browser has been closed, until the expiration date of each cookie (typically from two months to two years) or until they are erased by you.

Technical cookies are not used for purposes other than those described above.
